

Plumbers' Company Creates Almoner Role

The Worshipful Company of Plumbers is widely regarded as one of the friendliest of London's Livery Companies. The Court was therefore pleased to accept a recommendation at its recent meeting from the Membership Committee that the Company should create the role of Almoner. The principal aim of the Almoner will be to keep in touch with Liverymen who are unable, for a range of reasons, to participate regularly in the Company's events and functions. Although the Company has enjoyed ad hoc arrangements for keeping in touch with Liverymen over many years, it is believed that this is the first time that the title of Almoner (which is used in several other companies) has been adopted.

Liveryman Caroline Walsh has been appointed as the Company's first Almoner. Caroline, whose home is in Eltham, near Greenwich, has been a Liveryman since 2004 and she looks forward to developing this role. Please do not hesitate to contact her if you are aware of one of our liverymen needing her support. She can be contacted either by email on: c.a.walsh@btinternet.com or by phone on 07789 743333. Liverymen who know others who might appreciate occasional contact from a representative of the Company are invited to pass on details to Caroline.
