WHO NEEDS UNIVERSITY, WHEN APPRENTICESHIPS ARE BETTER?

The demand to deliver new environmentally sustainable technologies, that are required to meet the energy supply and climate change challenges we face, are huge.

The big question is, can we meet this demand in time? Our eminent speakers at the 2023 lecture will set out the industry requirements, and then discuss how we need to deliver training and education to meet them as quickly and effectively as possible.

The discussion, led by the keynote speakers, will focus on the benefits of paid apprenticeships versus university, and the variety of pathways that are available to those who begin their careers by gaining hands-on work experience alongside additional training.
